Become a Presenter

1. Submit a Proposal

If you would like to present, start by submitting a proposal.

2. Get Accepted

After we receive your presentation proposal, it moves to the evaluation step. We welcome the submission of proposals at any time of the year. All proposals will be reviewed between two to four weeks of submission.

3. Register

Once your proposal is accepted, you must register before our conference team can schedule your presentation.

Benefits from Participating

Constructive Feedback and Networking:

Authors of each paper presented would receive written comments from assigned discussants. These comments are motivated by a desire to support, encourage and improve the papers presented. The paper presentation environment is kept cordial where constructive criticism is encouraged. Coffee is served during all session breaks, facilitating continuation of discussion from the meeting rooms to the hallways. Networking can continue during organized breakfast and lunch times as well. All papers presented at the IAPA&M conferences are eligible for publication in the International Academy of Public administration Review.

Publication Opportunities:

The IAPA&M provides publication opportunities to academics & researchers though five journals:

- International Academy of Business (IAB), Howard University, Washington D. C. USA
- International Journal of Social and Management Sciences (IJSMS)
- International Journal of Public Administration & Management (IJPA&M) and
- International Academy of Public Administration and Management Review (IAPA&MR)
- International Journal of Science and Technology (IJST)

Teaching Workshops:

The IAPA&M recognizes the importance of teaching and holds teaching workshops at its conferences, headed by experienced teachers. These workshops focus on tools and techniques that seem to work for most student populations. Teaching workshops provide faculty development and networking opportunities for academics who may otherwise not be presenting a research paper at the conference.

Research Alliance:

The IAB recognized the importance given to collaborative research and to collaborative responses to grant proposals. The organization plans to have sessions at each conference exploring the development of joint proposals in response to various current public policy issues or other topical research ideas.

Participation Certificates:

Participation certificates are provided to everyone attending the teaching workshops. Documentation on the number of hours of participation for participants seeking continuing professional education (CPE) is provided on request.
